

Amtrak also has maintenance facilities at various locations that can be used for filming in certain circumstances. Some of these facilities can be used to portray factory and industrial locations, not necessarily of a railroad nature.

The cost of filming on Amtrak property varies depending upon the location, the amount of time you use the property, and your production's complexity. There will be no surprises or red tape. Our film coordinator will discuss all details and requirements up front, including safety issues and any potential interruptions from regularly scheduled Amtrak or freight train service or other operations.

Amtrak West actively solicits your business. Give us a try. We'll go out of our way to try to accommodate you and your requirements.

AMTRAK® WEST Filming

When you think of filming a passenger train or railroad station location, think of Amtrak.

In California, Oregon and Washington, Amtrak® West's rail route system covers over 2,500 miles serving more than 75 communities. Our operations extend from San Diego to Vancouver, B.C., and include scenic routes along both the spectacular California coast through Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo, and down the agriculturally rich San Joaquin Valley through Fresno and Bakersfield. We traverse the rugged Sierra Nevada mountain wilderness between Sacramento and Reno, and the "Wild West" terrain from Los Angeles to Barstow and Las Vegas. In short, we offer passenger trains in the full spectrum and variety of scenery available throughout these three western states.

Amtrak West is ready to consider your requirements. We can rent a station location, railroad passenger car, or an entire train for your filming purposes. We also can provide props, such as seats, windows or other hardware items if your requirements call for building a mock-up for studio filming of interior scenes. And if you need posters, timetables or other props, we have them, too.

Interested in renting a train for your production? Amtrak West is actively soliciting this business, and if the equipment is available, we can supply an entire Amtrak train—locomotives, coaches, dining cars, lounge cars, sleeping cars—and the crew to operate it. We can take your train out into the countryside to a quaint historic depot, or park it at major city station. We will provide a knowledgeable Amtrak West film coordinator to streamline the planning process, act as your liaison, and handle any required coordination with the freight railroads or other property owners.

We also can provide your production with exclusive occupancy of an Amtrak car on a regularly scheduled Amtrak train if you are looking for in-motion interior shots.

Our stations include every architectural design from majestic Los Angeles Union Station to the newest and most modern in the transportation business.
